

Businesses do not just exist to make a profit. Remaining a sustainable entity is a key priority against which we all have to operate now!

Measuring our impact

Whilst recognising that the existence of environmental impact is crucial, it is also vital that we actually measure the impact of what we do.

Thus, we increasingly monitor our internal operations as well as the effect of our products and services on our clients, society as a whole, and the wider environment.

Triumph and all its suppliers have achieved environmental accreditation (ISO14001:2004). We pride ourselves on being exceptional and ethical manufacturers. We are also working through the whole of our portfolio calculating the carbon footprint of each product in association with Best Foot Forward and the FIRA Furniture Footprinter Verification Scheme.

Our ongoing investment in facilities, equipment and enhanced business systems means that we have been able to continuously improve overall efficiency throughout all our businesses, whilst significantly enhancing the working environment for all our people.

Environmental fact sheets

Triumph produces a range of these specific Environmental Fact Sheets.

You can see an analysis of carbon footprint product by product, together with materials and life-cycle breakdowns, as well as eco credentials.

Corporate Social Responsibility

Today, we are all even more aware than ever of the role business plays in both local and global communities.

Businesses do not just exist to make a profit. Remaining a sustainable entity is a key priority against which we all have to operate now.

We operate dedicated internal teams who have formalised our CSR credentials and developed a rolling three-year reduction plan.

We want to be able to set an example by passing on a positive legacy to our future generations.

At Triumph, we have always attempted to do the right thing by our people and to minimise any negative impact of our activities on the environment. This is highlighted by our Investors in People and Club Green Awards.

We are significant local employers, leading suppliers and, increasingly, major global players. We always consider the welfare of our employees, and by the very nature of our business, the wellbeing of our customer's people as well.

So, the furniture products you see in this catalogue are evidence of our long-term commitment to our people, your people and our environment.
